

Pornography, Self-Control & Productivity Among Young Adults

Understanding the relationship between viewing habits, self-control, and productivity in young adults

Total Respondent

250

Completed the survey

First Exposed Before Age 18

74.04%

174 out of 235 respondents

Viewed in the Past 30 Days

65.60%

164 out of 250 respondents

Accidental Online Exposure

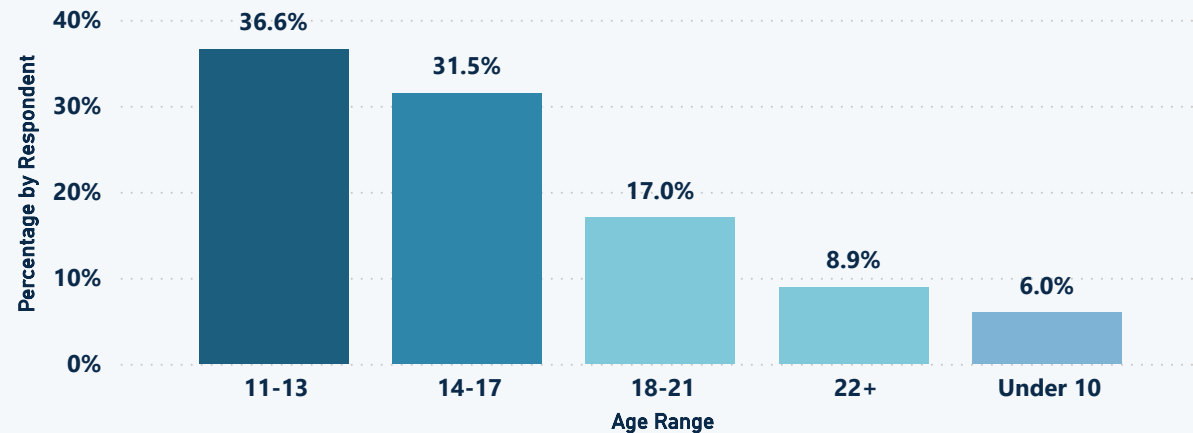

27.20%

68 out of 250 respondents

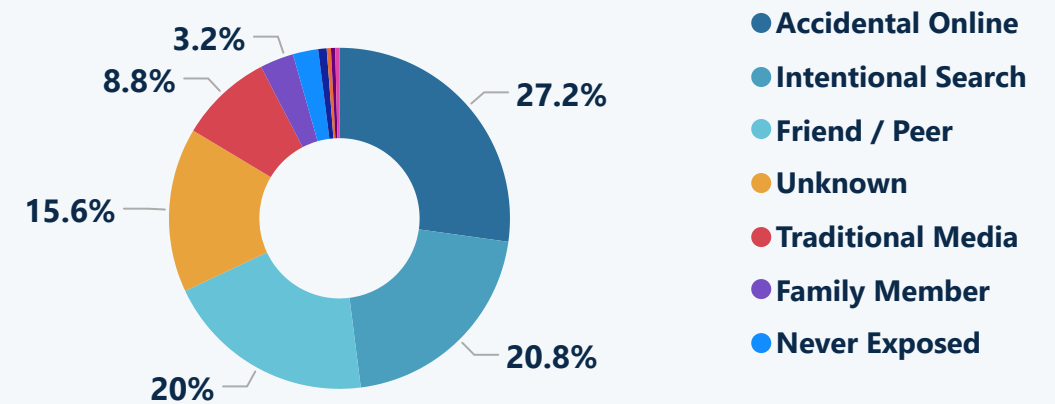

Age of First Intentional Exposure

A majority of respondents reported first intentional exposure before age 18.

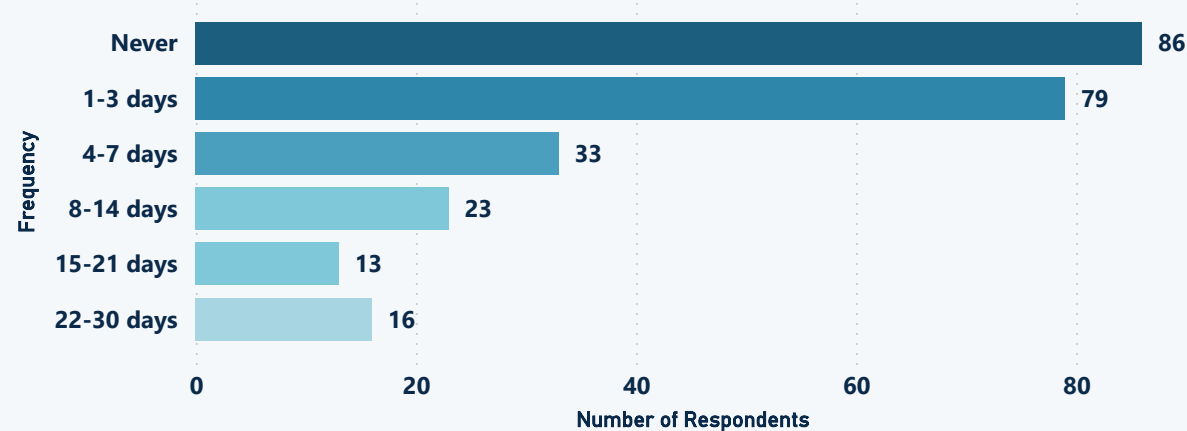

How Were you First introduced

Accidental online discovery is the single most common pathway.

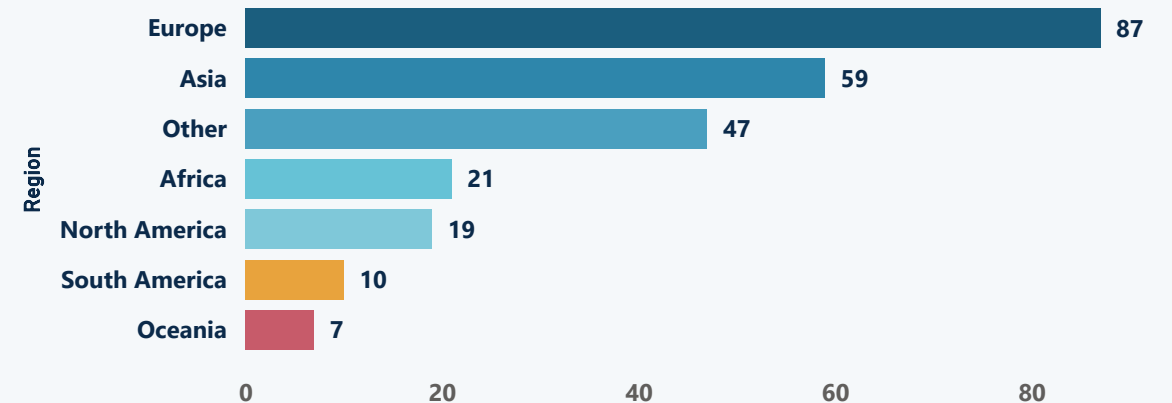

Current Viewing Frequency: Past 30 Days

Over half of respondents viewed at least once in the past 30 Days.

Geographic Distribution of respondents

Pornography, Self-Control & Productivity Among Young Adults

Relationships, Meditation Analysis and Key Findings

Pornography use is associated with lower self-control, while self-control plays a stronger role in productivity.

The Pathway.

A simple view of what the data suggest

 Pornography Use

 Lower Self-Control

 Lower Productivity

Pornography use ↔ Productivity

 -0.157

Weak negative relationship

Pornography use ↔ Self-control

 -0.260

Weak negative relationship

Self-control ↔ Productivity

 0.425

Moderate positive relationship

Average Self-Control by Viewing Frequency

Self-Control tends to decline as viewing frequency increases.

Key Insight

- 1 Pornography use is associated with weaker self-control.
- 2 Self-control is moderately associated with Productivity.
- 3 Porn lowers self-control, which lowers productivity

Self-control is positively associated with Productivity

Higher self-control scores are associated with higher productivity among young adult.

Correlation (r): 0.425
Moderate positive relationship.

